Women and Gender Constituency, Key Messages, Events and Social Media

December 1-12, COP20, LIMA, PERU

"Women want system change, not climate change" - WGC Statement from June Preparatory Forum
Margarita Declaration, July 2014

Overarching Messages

- Gender equality and human rights, including women's human rights, should be central to the new climate agreement, and all climate policies and actions.
- The WGC calls all countries to work towards a fair and legally binding agreement with sufficiently ambitious quantified GHG emission reductions taking into account the principle of common but differentiated responsibilities in 2015.
- Adaptation: WGC calls for urgent and prioritized action and resources that respond to the most vulnerable countries, communities and populations to produce equitable and just results.
- Mitigation: WGC calls Parties to uphold the principles of common but differentiated responsibilities (CBDR), in line with the principles of the Convention. The WGC demands a sustainable energy paradigm, prioritizing safe, decentralized renewable energy systems-- focusing on bottom-up approaches that benefit people and communities. We stand firm that high-risk technologies, such as nuclear, geo-engineering or the like, that create irreversible damage to our health and the planet have to be kept out of a 2015 agreement.
- Sustainability: WGC urges Countries to take the debate beyond its current focus on carbon to address broader environmental, social and economic issues around climate change reduction and adaptation
- Technology: WGC calls for a paradigm shift that recognizes women's human rights as well as their contributions to climate change responses, and promotes the development of new opportunities for women in the mitigation and technology sectors. Women have a right to be active participants in the value chain of climate responsive technologies and beneficiaries of economic opportunities that may arise from a just and safe energy transition.
- Participation: WGC supports the full and inclusive participation of civil society in all levels of climate change decision-making, including CSOs represented through formalized UNFCCC Constituencies alongside social movements, local communities, women led and feminist groups; persons with disabilities; and persons with diverse sexual orientation and gender identity. WGC urges Countries to foster the full and effective participation of women, the inclusion of women's human rights and gender equality issues in these processes, and the promotion of women's views and perspectives
- Public/Private Partnerships- WGC is alarmed by the increasing trend of prioritizing public-private partnerships and the 'transformative' role of the private sector in combating climate change without equally challenging the fact that private companies are not obligated to invest in social needs and global public good, nor accounting for the ways in which the private sector, especially large trans-national corporations, have contributed to establishing the unsustainable development model which drives catastrophic climate change. WGC affirms that regulation, and accountability and transparency of non-state actors, particularly trans-national corporations and public-private partnerships, are critical for achieving sustainable development. Therefore, the WGC urges caution to avoid the casual promotion of public-private partnerships to catalyze action on climate. We call for full transparency on all corporate contributions to the UN and its specialized agencies, including through public-private partnerships. We also call for rigorous adherence to the numerous normative rights frameworks and legally binding agreements in the field of sustainable development, which provide the foundation for the work of the United Nations.
